WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 3, 1901.

WHEN APRIL COMES When April comes gay orchasts trees, Full bicasemed, awaying in the breeze, Coquet with shedows—blu at kies, B am, radiant, like true love's eyes.

When April comes, green woods are filled With mustre sy, there robins bifid— And bluebirds, hued like heaven's arch, Imparadise the blooming larch.

When April comes, all budding things Influence faith to grow new wings, Whereon the heart, with hope slate, Doth new delights anticipate.

When April comes, spirits grown dumb With fears, 10 more to dread succumb-Renewed desire gives joy a velo . Meanings, divine, bid souls rejoice.

When Art I comes, the risen Christ,
With saving on fidence makes tryst;
And Essterlide, with joyfulness,
Fills hearts with love and tenderness.
—MARY VIRGINIA AGNEW.

KING EDWARD'S DEFINITI N OF GAMBLING .- King Elward, has given a sensible and broadminded definition of the word gambling. He describe of the word gambling. He describes gambling as a form of intemperance. The word intemperance does not merely mean an shuse of liquor. I may be applied to the abuse of eating, of smoking, of card-playing, of betting, etc. The intemperate use of anything constitutes intemperance, and it is intemperance in cards and intemperance in betting that constitutes gambling. That is what King Edward meant in his memorable letter to the late Archbishop of Canterbury, when he described himself as having a borror of gambling. He is very fond of a game of cards, but he loathesgambling. That gambling. He is very fond of a game of cards, but he loathes gambling. That is to say, he likes to pay for the said of the pastime which the game affords, the stakes, being, of course proportionate to the means of the players, and there is no doubt that he enjoyed quite as much his game when playing for five-shilling points at Hugh-euden Manor with the late Lord Besenden Manor with the late Lord Bes-consfield, who was a poor man, and with Beroal Osborne and Lord Rowton, as when playing for 20-guinea points with men such as the late Baron Hirsch, Reuben Sasson, Ferdinand Rottschild, etc. People who allow themselves to be led away either by the excitement of the led away either by the excitement of the game or by false pride and enobbishness to stake more than they can afford to lose are undoubtedly guilty of gambling, while the very moment that card-play is resorted to for the sake of the winnings, and that, instead of being used as a pastime and contests of skill between well-bred people, is used as a sordid method of fleecing acquaintances and friends, then it becomes gambling.

As a result of the action of the kile, 600 employes of the Frecton, N. J., potteries will be thrown out of employment in a few days, as it will be impessible to run the pottery unless the kiln men resume work. Already about 200 of the "clay hands" at the pottery are out of work on account of the action of the dissatisfied kiln men.
